Technical Spec for Webmaster/Web Lead
For the Gateway Ireland Project

The Gateway Ireland Project, which is currently preparing a feasibility report on a proposed national online content hub for Ireland, is looking for a web visionary to assist us in laying out strategy for its development and design.

As a key advisor of the project team, you will liaise with the project chairs and drive all technological and technical aspects of taking the project from concept to a fully-specified feasibility report to be submitted at the end of May.

While technical skills as a developer are a plus, we are essentially looking for the visionary who can help us coordinate specialist resources to flesh out our vision whilst employing a clear sense of project management ensuring all objectives are met during what will be an intensive feasibility period.

Beyond driving direction and mapping out a technical solution, we are looking for someone with strong knowledge of emergent web platforms, social media and above all the passion to think big to develop a game-changing content delivery mechanism.

As the technology lead for the project you will be responsible for:

- Developing the technical vision for the projects feasibly study – we are looking for a best-in class site globally to deliver interactive, rich-media content

- Defining the technology and developer strategy to achieve the content goals of the project

- Gauging the usability of emergent and existing technologies in achieving this outcome

- Costing and risk evaluation of various scenarios that will comprise the feasibility plan

- May be responsible for coordinating and hiring a technical manager / technical or developer resources for the implementation of programming and design (as needed).

Requirements:

- Track record of excellent in designing and executing upon large-scale internet projects

- World-class knowledge of consumer internet trends, applications (apps) environment etc.

- Strong design sense

- Commercial awareness and experience of online monetisation strategies a plus

- Excellent leadership, communication and teamwork skills.